

#2 (What women wear in public in Iran)

Immediately after the revolution:

The cartoon below is an Iranian-American interpretation of women's required dress from the year of the Iranian revolution (1979) to afterwards as women, especially university students, showed "opposition to dictatorship." From Sahimi, Muhamad (in Los Angeles). "Cultural Revolution' Redux." Frontline. 11 May 2010. Web. 29 Oct. 2018.

You read the cartoon (like the Persian language) from right to left. The first figure (the woman in full chador on the right) is labeled "Year 1." To her left is "Year 2" and then "Year 3." The final figure, on the far left, is "Year 4."

Photo by Atta Kenare. From the article "Iranian Woman Gets Two Years in Prison for Removing Head Scarf." Radio Free Europe, Radio Liberty. 7 March 2018. Web. 23 Oct. 2018.

From the article: Hatami, Aseyeh. "Iranian Women Face Uphill Battle toward Equal Pay." The Iran Project. 2 Aug. 2018. Web. 23 Oct. 2018.

Tehran, Iran, Tuesday, April 26, 2016. (AP Photo/Vahid Salemi) frin

A Warrick Page/Getty Image from: Skarda, Erin. "Iran's Women's Soccer Team's Modest Uniforms." Time. 1 Sept. 2011. Web. 28 Oct. 2018.