

The Grandeur of the Qing – Online Educational Module

The two monarchs, grandfather and grandson, who dominated the Qing dynasty (1644-1912), in large part created the political, economic, and cultural legacy inherited by modern China – and each had an artist of the time record one of his “inspection tours of the realm.” The scrolls provide a unique and vivid glimpse into the grandeur of late imperial China. These scrolls, never intended for a general audience, were kept in a special storeroom, as a record for later generations. We are the posterity exploring and learning from the scrolls! Join us to understand China before the Opium Wars and their aftermath.

To access all the educational materials, go to: <http://afe.easia.columbia.edu/qing/index.html>

Asia for Educators homepage: <http://afe.easia.columbia.edu/>